RIVER RAFTING

High adventure sports are becoming very popular among young people. These sports offer them the chance to relax from the tension of daily life in cities and towns. These activities are not only sports but also social events to have fun with friends and meet new people with similar tastes.

River rafting is one high adventure sport. Before trying it, you should take some things into consideration.

River rafting consists in riding an inflatable rubber boat down a violent river with the help of a paddle. Beginners should not try this sport by themselves. They should follow the instructions of an expert guide who will lead them down even the most raging rivers safely.

If you want to go river rafting, choose a good company which offers different levels of rafting from beginner to experienced. At first, you will go down a river that moves slowly and has only a few rocks. This level mixes both sport and nature, allowing you to enjoy the scenery as you float down the river. As you go more often, you can try a faster river with more powerful waves and more rocks. As you go more often, you will feel more secure about the risks you are taking. It is always very important to wear the special equipment for this outdoor activity.

If you are a risk-taker, in good shape and know how to react in difficult situations, river rafting is an ideal sport for you to spend a good weekend with friends or new people. Always raft safely and with other people in case you have an accident. The chances of falling overboard are high.
